GEN. LU YUNG-TING TO RESIST PEKING WITH ARMED FORCE

Admiral Chen Pi-kwan Engages To Defend The Southern Coast

COUNCIL IGNORED

Feng And Premier Anxious To Get Ex-President Back To Peking

(From the Chinese Press)

Inspector-General Lu Yung-ting has definitely announced his plans to resist the north with armed force. He consulted with Admiral Chen Pi-kwan on measures for the defence of the southern coast at Nanning and despatched him to carry out the work immediately. Emissaries have been sent to the different independent men-of-war, to explain his policy.

General Lu has also despatched a wire to the Peking Government, making important demands with reference to his privileges in the province of Hunan. The request by the Peking authorities for endorsement of the convocation of the National Council was absolutely ignored by General Lu.

In view of the numerous protests from various provinces against the selection of the personnel of the National Council by the Central Government, it has been decided to allow the Tuchuns to appoint their own delegates.

The Cabinet has telegraphed secretly to Kiangsu, Anhui, Hupeh and Kiangsi, to make military preparations and to be ready to answer the call for the suppression of the South with troops selected from the four provinces.

President Feng and the Premier have sent two more representatives to Tientsin, to urge former President Li Yuan-hung to return to Peking, to settle a certain important question of state.

STAMINA OF GERMANS FALLING, SAYS PERSHING

Superiority Of British Conclusively Proved; Wastage Is Enormous

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

Washington, October 1.—The second official communique issued by the War Department, commenting on the immense strategic importance of the British thrust in the region of the Menin road and the futile counter-attacks made by the Germans, says: "The superiority of the British over the enemy has been conclusively proved during the engagements of the past week. Furthermore, it shows that the fighting stamina of the Germans has deteriorated, not that the enemy did not display great skill and dogged determination in their repeated counter-attacks."

It finds that the outstanding feature of the fighting on the French front is the enormous wastage of German man-power.

The Weather

Overcast weather, but with a tendency to gradually improve. The maximum temperature recorded yesterday was 67.8 and the minimum 63.3, the figures for the corresponding day last year being respectively 78.1 and 59.9.

Girl To Drive Car On Belgian Front

Miss Virginia Heal, of Swampscott, Mass., daughter of Anna Hathaway, the poetess, will leave the United States soon for that section of Belgium which is still free of the invader. She goes to drive an ambulance, being one of the vanguard of American women who are making a name for bravery, daring and service in the great work of mercy.

Her machine is one of the Block Ambulance Division which is under the direction of Mlle. Gabriele Block and Countess Van Den Steen Jehay, who are members of L'Aide Civile et Militaire Belge, a relief organisation headed by Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth of Belgium.

The costume worn by Miss Heal will awaken favorable criticism of her Belgian and French cousins. Made of drill cloth, khaki colored, it is fitted with huge patch pockets. Her brown leather belt, tan shoes and stockings, and gloves, complete the martial appearance of the uniform. On her cap is the insignia of the Block ambulance service and over the pocket are the brass letters of the order.

Tientsin Flood Increasing; Yellow River Breaks Banks; More Cities Are Inundated

Water Rises Two Inches At Northern Port; Fearing Pestilence Authorities Take Precautions

Tientsin is flooded to a depth of from 4 to 10 feet and small boats have taken the places of ricshas, it was reported here, yesterday, following the arrival of the steamer Esang.

Despatches to the British-American Tobacco Co., the day before yesterday, advised the discontinuing of shipments to Tientsin and stated that the water was again rising. It was feared that the Company's compound, which is some feet higher than the surrounding country and hitherto not in danger from the water, might be flooded.

At Tientsin, two more inches were added to the height of the water on Tuesday. Work on dredging has already begun and employment was given to sufferers. One hundred thousand catties of bread were conveyed to the city from Peking, to feed the destitute.

Yellow River Breaks Banks

Three thousand, three hundred feet of the banks of the Yellow River in Chihli Province collapsed yesterday, according to the Eastern News Service. The towns of Panchwang and Tatien and neighboring villages were submerged.

Twenty-six villages near Tientsin were submerged and all the residents drowned, according to a report of the New Shunpao. Details of the disaster, however, were unavailable. The overflow of the Yellow River at two points in the vicinity of Tehchow has been confirmed.

The Tientsin-Pukow trains cannot go beyond the bridge crossing the river. The port of Taku has been blocked as a result of the flood and is now inaccessible to steamers. The vessels from Shanghai are compelled to unload their cargoes at Tangku.

Peking-Hankow Resumes

Traffic on the Peking-Hankow Railway was resumed Tuesday. There is only one local train a day and, at three places, the journey has to be made on ferry-boats. The entire journey from Hankow to Peking takes 38 hours.

More than five thousand sufferers were saved by members of the Red Cross Society and the Tientsin river police, below Nankwan, south-west of the old city. The rescued are now quartered in two theaters and the market-place of the Second Special Administrative Region. Walls are being built on the south-west corner of the city by troops of the Third Division, under the supervision of Mayor Shih Chi-sien and General Chao Chung-fang, the aide of the Chihli Tuchun.

Fear Diseases May Spread

To check the spreading of diseases following the flood, the British Municipal Council has inaugurated an emergency service. The residents are warned not to dump any refuse into the flood water.

Light has again been secured for the British Concession, by the installation of a transformer connected with the French power plant by a high tension cable. An emergency committee was formed, consisting of experts in electrical engineering, who are responsible for the supply.

Former President Li Yuan-hung has moved from his residence in the British Concession to the Honan Guild, as his home was surrounded by water. Vessels were sent by the Red Cross Society and the river police to his old residenc to convey his family and belongings elsewhere.

Don't Expect Early Relief

Early relief can hardly be looked for, as the heavy rainfall in Honan and Shansi is augmenting the flood-water west of Tientsin. Vessels are unavailable for transportation. Shallow punts and boats are seen everywhere in construction, some of them made out of packing cases, while others are more substantial.

A consignment of 6,000 suits of cotton-stuffed clothes and numerous boxes of medicine and biscuits were shipped by the Shanghai Red Cross Society, per s.s. Tungchow, for Tientsin, yesterday.

Maude Takes 13,000 Prisoners At Ramadie

Victory Upsets Enemy's Plans To Attempt The Recapture Of Bagdad

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

Paris, October 2.—The British have taken 13,000 Turks prisoners in Mesopotamia.

The newspapers give prominence to the victory in Mesopotamia and point out that it has upset the preparations being made by the Germans and the Turks to attempt to re-capture Bagdad.

London, October 1.—The King has sent the following message to General Maude:—"I send my best congratulations to you and to all the troops concerned in the capture of the Turkish forces at Ramadie. I fully appreciate the skill of the leadership, as well as the spirit and gallantry of all ranks, which enabled them to overcome the difficulties of the country and climate and the resistance of the stubborn enemy."

An official despatch from Mesopotamia reports:—"Owing to the extent of the fighting area at Ramadie, it is at present impossible to give a complete list of our captures, which include 13 guns, 12 machine-guns, 600 wounded and 3,200 unwounded prisoners, of whom 200 are officers. We have buried 200 Turks."

MR. HOOVER ASKS WEEK OF FOOD CONSERVATION

'The Allies Must Feed And Food Will Win The War,' Says Controller

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

Washington, October 1.—Mr. Hoover, the Food Controller, appeals to the country to observe a huge food-conservation week from October 21 to 28, emphasising the demands which are being made upon the United States and declaring: "The Allies are our first line of defence. They must feed and food will win the war."

The movement includes a house-to-house canvass of 22,000,000 families.

Von Hindenburg At Work

Probably the most remarkable personal portrait study ever taken of the "strong man of Germany," Field Marshal von Hindenburg.

The picture shows him seated at his desk, musing over a war map in sad need of revision. With his august lord, the Kaiser, he spends much time puzzling out ways and means for holding his west front lines.

REGISTRATION ILLEGAL ENEMIES HERE PROTEST

Germans And Austrians Send Communication To Council; Hint Legal Proceedings

Declaring the Municipal registration of German and Austro-Hungarian subjects to be illegal and reserving to themselves the right to take legal proceedings against the Shanghai Municipal Council and its members, those of the communities affected have lodged a formal protest with the Council.

The protest was transmitted to the Council by Mr. C. Stepharius, prominent German resident of Shanghai, in behalf of the German and Austro-Hungarian communities and enumerates the grounds on which the registration is declared illegal. Mr. Stepharius' letter and the protest as reported in this week's Municipal Gazette follow:

"Shanghai, September 25, 1917.

Sir.—As senior of the German and Austro-Hungarian communities of Shanghai, I have been requested to hand you the enclosed protest of the two communities against Municipal Notification No. 2466 concerning the registration of German and Austro-Hungarian subjects.

I am, Sir,

Your obedient servant,

C. STEPHARIUS.

N. O. LIDDELL, Esq.,

Acting Secretary, Municipal Council."

"1.—The International Settlement of Shanghai is no Sovereign State.

"2.—The jurisdiction over the residents in the International Settlement rests neither with the Consular Body as such nor with the Shanghai Municipal Council, but with the Consul of each individual ratepayer.

"3.—China has declared war on Germany and Austria and Hungary and assumed jurisdiction over Germans and Austrians and Hungarians, the Chinese Authorities thereby assuming the place of the German and Austrian and Hungarian Consular Officials.

"4.—The Shanghai Municipal Council is nothing but the executive organ for the will of the above Authorities.

"5.—The Chinese Authorities have neither asked for nor consented to the steps the Shanghai Municipal Council intends to take against Germans and Austrians and Hungarians under Notification No. 2466.

"6.—These steps are, therefore, unlawful, and the German and Austrian and Hungarian communities—if forced to yield to them—protest most emphatically against such arbitrary action on the part of the Shanghai Municipal Council, and reserve to themselves the right to take legal proceedings against the Shanghai Municipal Council and its Members as soon as normal conditions have been re-established."

Replying for the Council, Mr. N. O. Liddell writes to Mr. Stepharius that the protest is noted.

COMMUNICATIONS BANK GETS $20,000,000 LOAN

Japanese Deal Completed; Tokio Financial Expert To Be Engaged As Adviser

Special Cable to The China Press

Peking, October 3.—The Bank of Communications reorganisation loan of twenty million Dollars was signed today by Tsao Ju-lin and the Japanese representative. The conditions include a specie payment on the security of Government Treasury bonds and the employment of a Japanese financial expert as the bank's adviser. The bank must not negotiate loans from other foreign sources. The lenders are the Taiwan, Chosen and Hsinyeh Banks. Owing to this loan, the value of notes of the Bank of Communications is rising.

Delayed Negotiations

Reuter's Pacific Service to The China Press

Peking, October 3.—At the beginning of the year, the Bank of Formosa, the Bank of Chosen and the Industrial Bank of Japan loaned the Bank of Communications Y.5,000,000 for reorganisation purposes. Some time ago, the Bank of Communications again approached these three banks for a loan of Y.20,000,000.

The conclusion of the negotiations was delayed through the question of security, the Japanese banks requesting the income of the Peking-Suiyuan Railway, or the proceeds of the wine and tobacco monopoly. An agreement was signed, however, on September 29, by Mr. Tsao Ju-lin, as managing director of the Bank of Communications, Lu Tsung-yu, representing the shareholders and Mr. Yamanari and Mr. Ikeda, of the Bank of Formosa, on the following terms:

The amount of the loan to be Y.20,000,000, the term three years, interest 7½ per cent and security $25,000,000 of Government bonds, which are to be held by the bank. The money will be used for the reorganisation of the Bank of Communications, including the redemption of notes, but at present only a small part will be transferred to Peking, the remainder being invested in Japan till the rate of exchange is more favorable.

It is understood that the note issue of the Bank of Communications in Peking is $17,000,000. Another condition of the loan is the employment of a Japanese adviser. Mr. Fujiwara, a director of the Bank of Chosen, has been nominated by the Japanese banks concerned for the post. Also, if further loans are required, the three banks making the present loan shall be given preference.

HAIG TAKES 5,296 PRISONERS DURING SEPTEMBER DRIVE

Captures 11 Guns, Including 3 Big Ones, 57 Trench Mortars, 377 Maxims

MANY AIR FIGHTS

British Account for Twenty More German Machines, Losing 7 Themselves

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

London, October 2.—Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig reported yesterday evening:—The enemy today launched a powerful attack on a mile front, northward of the Ypres to Menin road and eastward of Polygon Wood. Their infantry, advancing in three waves, were driven back in disorder, after suffering heavy casualties. We followed up and took a few prisoners.

The enemy twice renewed their attack in strength during the next three hours, but, after heavy fighting, they were repulsed everywhere except opposite the south-east corner of Polygon Wood, where they occupied two advanced posts.

Take 5,296 Prisoners

In September, we took 5,296 prisoners, including 146 officers and also captured eleven guns, including three of heavy caliber, 57 trench-mortars and 377 machine-guns.

The visibility improved on Sunday and there was much artillery and photograph work carried out. Bombing has continued without respite, day and night. Eleven tons of bombs were dropped on the aerodrome at Gontrode, billets and communications in the battle-area and a dump and the headquarters near Cambrai.

The enemy carried out many bombing raids during the night, but little damage of military importance was done. Our photographs of the results of the bombing of Gontrode aerodrome show that a shed was hit and also that three large machines had landed in a field three miles southward of the aerodrome, two of them being clearly damaged.

A large shed accommodating Gotha machines is reported to have been set on fire last night. Four German machines were brought down and eight driven down yesterday. Five of ours are missing.

Repulse Six Attacks

Sir Douglas Haig reported today: Yesterday and during the night, the enemy made five attacks with fresh troops between the Ypres to Menin road and the north-eastern corner of Polygon Wood. They also attacked Zonnebeke.

All six attacks ended in complete failure, with the exception of the loss of posts reported yesterday. The enemy suffered heavy losses and gained no advantage. We repulsed raiders southward of Lens.

Sir Douglas Haig reported this evening: There have been only reciprocal artillery actions. We twice attacked Gontrode aerodrome on Monday. Several bombs burst on the sheds. We also bombed the aerodrome at Carmieres, near Cambrai and twice attacked a German long-range gun.

We brought down five enemy machines and drove down three. Two of ours are missing. Our aeroplanes, during the month of September, dropped 125 tons of bombs.

Beat Down German Guns

Reuter's correspondent at British headquarters reports:—The enemy counter-attacked very heavily in the neighborhood of Tower Hamlets, this morning, on a front for which they have already fought very hard. A bombardment of great intensity preceded their attacks, but our reply was considerably more violent. A mist hampered our airmen at the outset, but conditions improved.

The first attack was launched by the enemy at 6.15 this morning, on a wide front astride the Menin road. The first and second waves of infantry were so badly hammered by our artillery that they did not reach us.

The third wave got into contact with our front, but broke and fell back in face of steady and devastating machine-gun and rifle fire.

Simultaneously, a body of our men, cheering, broke forward in pursuit and established themselves 100 yards in advance of our previous line.

A second attack, at 8.40 a.m., was almost everywhere repulsed. Our posts were slightly bent back at one point. Fighting continues. These operations have been terribly costly to the enemy.

Welshmen's Gallantry

As a result of the fighting arising from the German counter-attack, yesterday, our position beyond Cameron House seems to have been largely, if not quite restored, whilst elsewhere we advanced over 100 yards, owing to the gallantry of the Welsh troops, who drove back the enemy.

I learn that the ground in front of our line is strewn with German corpses. The enemy have suffered frightful losses in unsuccessful attempts to regain some shell-hole areas which they profess to regard as without value from a tactical point of view.

There is a considerable proportion of Poles and Alsatians among the new troops the Germans have hurried up to defend Menin Ridge.

The enemy are desperately anxious to impress their people at home with the extent of their "victory" in Flanders, for which reason they have been resorting to an old trick. The mere handful of prisoners they have taken in the recent fighting were sent to a town where a number of prisoners who had been taken in previous actions were assembled and all of them were marched through the town, while cinematograph pictures were taken for the benefit of the public in Berlin.

German Bulletin

(By wireless).—A German official communique reports:—"We captured a portion of Polygon Wood, five hundred meters deep and withstood repeated counter-attacks. We penetrated to the rear of the French position near Bezonvaux and took 100 prisoners."

French Restore Line

Paris, October 2.—The official communique issued yesterday reported:—There have been somewhat lively artillery actions on the Aisne front and on the right bank of the Meuse. After a violent bombardment, the Germans attacked between Chaume Wood and Bezonvaux and a desperate fight ensued in our advanced trenches, which ended in our favor. Our line was completely restored.

The communique this afternoon reported:—There has been marked reciprocal artillery work on the whole of the Aisne front, especially in the sector of Craonne. The artillery duel was particularly intense on the right of the Meuse, during the night, on the front from Samogneux to Bezonvaux. We stopped two attacks in the Beaumont sector, inflicting appreciable losses on the enemy.

Enemy aeroplanes very violently bombarded Dunkirk. Serious material damage was done and a number of civilians were killed or wounded. As a reprisal we dropped bombs on Stuttgart, Treves, Coblentz and Frankfurt-on-Main.

Our bombing machines also dropped over 2,000 kilograms of explosives on the depots at Roulers and 6,000 kilograms on the railway stations of Mazsudwoippy, Thionville, the aerodrome at Chumbley, the bivouacs at Spincourt and Tilly and a munition depot at Longeau Farm, where a violent explosion was observed. We brought down two aeroplanes yesterday.

BRITISH AIR-RAIDS

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

London, October 2.—The Admiralty reports:—Our naval aircraft, on Sunday, bombed the hangars of St. Denis Westrem aerodrome, igniting one. The fire was visible for thirty miles. They also bombed Zeebrugge lock-gates.

Another raid was made on St. Denis Westrem at noon on Monday. Several direct hits were obtained and our bombs ignited two sheds.

The shed hit on Sunday appears to have been completely gutted.

Amsterdam, October 2.—It is reported that fifteen German aeroplanes were destroyed in the Allied air-raid on the aerodrome at St. Denis Westrem on September 30.

ARSENAL EXPLOSION

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

London, October 2.—The Press Bureau reports that there has been a serious fire and explosion in a munitions factory in the North of England. Much damage was done to the factory, but no deaths have yet been reported, although a number of workers were injured.

Crack British Flyer Killed Voss In Duel

Followed German In Sensational Dive, Emptying Machine-Gun At Him

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

London, October 1.—Reuter's correspondent at British headquarters, giving instances of the feats of British airmen, tells how the famous German airman, Lieutenant Voss, was killed. Two British aeroplanes saw Voss' triplane and another aeroplane engaging a British machine and hastened to the latter's assistance.

One of the British machines was piloted by a crack airman and the combat resolved itself into a duel between him and Lieutenant Voss. For a while, they made a running fight, maintaining a stream of bullets from their machine-guns and maneuvering for position, so that the wings of their aeroplanes were within a few feet of each other.

When the Englishman had replaced his drum of ammunition a third time, he succeeded in getting above Lieutenant Voss, who shut off his engine and dived earthwards. The Englishman followed and got a good burst of fire right upon Lieutenant Voss, whose machine glided down until it bumped the ground and it was evident that Lieutenant Voss had been killed in his seat.

An airman who crossed the enemy's line at Zonnebeke had an exciting experience. He dived from 2,000 feet to use his machine-gun against a party of Huns, whom he scattered. He bombed a munition-dump, but was attacked by superior forces and dived through the barrage into the British lines.

His aeroplane was crippled and he was wounded in the leg. Two stretcher-bearers were carrying him in when a shell killed one and wounded the other. The aviator rose to assist the injured man, when a second shell wounded him again, whereupon he limped to cover.

Four British machines recently attacked nine German aeroplanes and sent down five of them, one on fire. All our machines returned safely.

SIXTH SUCCESSIVE RAID ON ENGLAND DEFEATED

Four Groups Of Planes Engaged; Ten People Killed, Thirty-Eight Injured

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

London, October 2.—London experienced a sixth aerial raid last night. The firing of the anti-aircraft guns stopped shortly after 10 p.m. Generally speaking, the bombardment by the guns was not so continuous as on Sunday and Saturday, a lull in the firing being more frequent, but the barrage, when it started, seemed to be heavier.

The whole sky was alight with shrapnel bursts and star-shells, while fragments of shrapnel whistled overhead. The first reports from the coast say that bombs were dropped mostly in open fields.

The Press Bureau issues the following communique: "As the result of the air-raid last night, ten persons were killed and thirty-eight injured. It is officially stated that all our pilots landed safely during the raids made during the last eight days."

An official massage says: "A group of aeroplanes crossed the Essex coast at 7 o'clock yesterday evening, moving in the direction of London. It was followed a quarter-of-an-hour later by a second group.

"The first attack on London came from the north-east, at 7.45 p.m. The majority of the enemy machines were turned back, but one or more penetrated our defences and dropped bombs in the south-western district.

"At 8.15 p.m. a second group attempted to cross our defences north-east and north of London, but without success until shortly after 9 p.m., when a few passed over London and bombs were again dropped in the south-western district. A third group of raiders crossed the Kentish coast and did not penetrate far westward, but dropped their bombs in various places.

"A fourth group crossed the coast of Essex and approached London, shortly before 10 p.m., but did not penetrate beyond the north-eastern outskirts, where bombs were dropped."

(By wireless).—A German official communique reports: Last night, our aviators again attacked London, Sheerness, Ramsgate and Dover.

Obituary

Mr. M. C. de Souza

The funeral services for the late Mr. Miguel Chrysanto de Souza, who died on October 1, from heart failure, were held on Tuesday afternoon at the Bubbling Well Cemetery in the presence of a large gathering. S. AFRICAN CONFERENCE REJECTS REPUBLICANISM

Follows Botha In Determination To Maintain The Union And Constitution

(Reuter's Agency War Service)

Pretoria, October 1.—At the opening of the South African Party Congress, the chairman, Mr. van Heerden, Minister of Agriculture, dealing with the subject of industries, congratulated the country on its great progress and unprecedented prosperity, notwithstanding the war.

The Premier of South Africa, General Botha, in the course of his address, emphasised the fact that the war had been forced upon the Allies and that the only thing to do now was to fight to a finish. An inconclusive peace would only mean another and perhaps greater war in the future, which would constitute a serious menace to Africa. Let the peace, added General Botha, be one which will be beneficial to the whole world and enable every country to shape its future on a sound basis.

Referring to the Republican propaganda, General Botha pointed out that the people of South Africa lived under a Constitution which granted them every kind of liberty. It now seemed, he said, as though the Nationalists wished to break down the Constitution which they themselves had helped to draft. The Nationalists, he asserted, were not in earnest, but only wished to gain a few votes.

He was second to none in his love for the Republican system, but he warned its propagandists that they were playing with fire. In conclusion, General Botha denied the rumors of a coalition of his Party with the Unionists, maintaining that it would be dangerous to swop horses in the middle of the fast running stream and dangerous to go in for new ventures when their main object should be to see the war brought to a successful issue.

The Congress debated a reunion with the Nationalist Party and finally passed a resolution that it was prepared to bring about a better understanding on the basis of, firstly, maintenance of the Union and Constitution; secondly, the carrying out of the obligations connected with them and, thirdly, the maintenance of the principles of the South African Party.

Both the mover and the seconder of the resolution emphasised that they could have nothing to do with the Republican propaganda of the Nationalist Party, which would be fatal to any possibility of reunion. The subsequent discussion disclosed the clear and emphatic repudiation of the Republican propaganda, the amended motion unanimously endorsing Mr. John Merriman's resolution against the Republican propaganda as accepted by the last session of the South African Parliament.

The congress passed unanimously resolutions thanking General Smuts for his services and hoping for his safe return and also providing land for the settlement of returned soldiers.

The Cape branch of the South African Party presented the Premier, General Botha, with an address eulogising his services and emphasising that he has the support of the large majority of the people of Cape Province.

Intimate Journals Of Count Leo Tolstoy

(Reviewed By The New York Sun)

Nothing but the express or clearly implied sanction of the author could justify the publication after his death of such a book as The Journal of Leo Tolstoy, 1895-1899 (Alfred A. Knopf), translated from the Russian by Rose Strunsky and edited by the author's intimate personal friend and countryman V. G. Chertkov. This diary consists largely of a series of disclosures of the writer's inmost processes of thought while many of his views still remained vague and incoherent and had not yet ripened into any well considered and mature conclusions. It seems clear, however, that Count Tolstoy intended that these notes should ultimately be given to the world after revision by his friend, the present editor. His widow, deeming them a gift to the nation, turned them over to the custody of the Moscow Historical Museum, and Mr. Chertkov has thus far been able to prepare for publication only those portions of which he has copies. These make up the contents of the present volume.

Miss Strunsky, the accomplished translator, declares in her introduction that the meaning of the Russian revolution which took place in March, 1917, can be best understood through the pages of this journal. "The spiritual qualities which make up the mind and personality of Tolstoy are the spiritual qualities which make up the new era among men which is being waged so painfully and so uncompromisingly at the present moment upon the soil of Russia." If this be true no apology is needed for divulging so much mental perturbation as these diaries constantly disclose; but otherwise we should doubt the good taste of the edifor in telling so much.

Furthermore the journal seems to have been edited on the principle that every crumb which fell from the great man's table should be preserved and canned for the benefit of posterity. In the Paris museum which contains the relics of the Emperor Napoleon some visitors find profound interest in examining the well worn golden toothbrush which belonged to his campaign kit. Such persons and such persons alone will care to read many of the insignificant details concerning Tolstoy's daily life which are scattered through this volume. To be told that he got up late on a particular morning, that he tried to work and fell asleep, that he had a pain in his spinal column, that he dreaded a journey to Moscow and that his health would be good if his back did not ache adds little of importance to the knowledge of mankind and nothing to the gayety of nations. These passages should have been censored by the editor.

We have in the present volume only four years of a journal which Tolstoy kept for more than sixty years. Miss Strunsky suggests that its very formlessness of phrase helps to elucidate the sincerity of the underlying thought. "Tolstoy himself know the value of these documents, for one man was to him as another and the sincere gropings of man's reason toward the understanding of the meaning of life was of value even if they were his own, and especially if they were of one who had lived much and thought much as he did." The reverence for his memory in Russia today is shown by the fact that the first act of the March revolution was to redecorate the grave of Tolstoy in the forest of Takaz and to make a sacred pilgrimage to his resting place.

To give an idea of the style of the journal let us quote one entry, that under date of January 25, 1896, written at Moscow:

"During these two days the chief event was the death of Nagornov. Always new and full of meaning is death. It occurred to me: They represent death in the theater. Does it produce one-millionth of that impression which the nearness of a real death produces?

"I continue writing the drama. I have written four acts. All bad. But it is beginning to resemble a real thing."

Other characteristic specimens indicate the physical and mental burdens which beset Tolstoy during this period of his life:

"It is now 10 o'clock in the evening. I am going to supper. I want to work very much but am without intellectual energy, a great weakness, yet I want to work terribly. If God would only give it tomorrow!"

"All this time I wrote on the Declaration of Faith. I made little progress. Chertkov, Birinkov were here and went away. I have stopped riding the bicycle. I wonder how I could have been so infatuated."

"It is now 2 o'clock. I am going to dinner. I took a walk, slept in the morning, read 'Trilby.' And I want to sleep all the time."

It may be noted incidentally that in a subsequent entry he pronounces "Trilby" poor.

To the general reader the most interesting portions of the journals contained in this volume are the entries relating to the author's own philosophy and his views on religion, art and woman.

"There is no Tolstoyanism," he declares, "and has never been, nor any teaching of mine. There is only one eternal, general, universal teaching of the truth which for me, for us, is especially clearly expressed in the Gospels. This teaching calls man to the recognition of his filiality to God and therefore of his freedom or his slavery (call it what you want); of his freedom from the influence of the world, of his slavery to God, His will. And as soon as man understands this teaching he enters freely into communication with God, and he has nothing and no one to ask."

The disciples of Tolstoy, past and present, in Russia and elsewhere, will hardly assent to the modest disclaimer of their teacher and leader. His social creed of unselfishness and love, even for one's enemies, has appealed and still appeals powerfully to thousands of his countrymen. His methods of carrying it into effect may not always be practicable, but the more his gospel of service is studied and understood the greater will be our respect for his purity of motive and genuine love for his fellow men.

The journals abound with reflections on the difficulty of conceiving the existence of God and the continuance of the life of the spirit after the death of the body. At the same time, Tolstoy constantly urges that a religious change in the soul of the people is the only means by which intelligent Socialists can lift the working man intellectually and physically. "Seek the Kingdom of God and His right," he says, "and the rest will follow you." By so doing only can the ends of Socialism be attained, he tells us; yet it is hard to discover just how he would have men obey, the precept which he lays down with so much emphasis. In short, we are left in the dark as to what precisely is the religious faith, by the practice of which the social redemption of mankind may be accomplished. Some biographers of Tolstoy assert that his latest views were in substantial accord with modern Unitarianism. This does not help us much, however, as the Unitarians of the present day differ so much among themselves.

From 1896 to 1898 Tolstoy was engaged from time to time in writing his book entitled "What Is Art?" and this naturally suggested many entries in his diary relative to artistic subjects. The essential of a true work of art in his view is that it shall be comprehensible. "If I don't understand it that means that the work of art is poor, because its task is in making understandable that which is not understandable." In a work of art, he says in another place, the principal thing is the soul of the author; and refinement and power in art he finds are always diametrically opposed. In music Tolstoy's taste seems to have been exceptional. He evidently did not admire Beethoven, and he could not sit through a singlee act of Wagner's "Siegfried." Of this opera he wrote: "It is stupid, unfit for children above 7 years of age, a Punch and Judy show, pretentious, feigned, entirely false and without any music whatever." It seems that in his home at Yasnaya Polyana the household were once in the habit of playing incessantly on four grand pianos. Recalling this, it became clear to him that "all this—the romances, the poems, the music—was not art, something important and necessary to people in general, but a self-indulgence of robbers, parasites, who have nothing in common with life; romances, novels about how one falls in love disgustingly, poetry about this or about how one languishes from boredom. And music about the same theme. But life, all life seethes with its own problems of food, distribution, labor, about faith, about the relations of men. It is shameful, nasty. Help me Father, to serve Thee, by showing up this lie!" Precisely who the parasites and robbers were whom Tolstoy had in mind when he thus wrote it is not easy to perceive.

He was even more severe on modern women than he was on modern music—that is to say, if we infer his attitude from the contents of these journals alone. The editor, however, cautions us that these entries in reality carry no reflection against all women in general. The manner in which women are treated in the diary may be illustrated by a few quotations, thus: "Women do not consider the demands of reason binding upon themselves, and cannot progress according to them. They haven't got this sail spread. They row without a rudder." Still further on he says: "They do not run after a poet or a painter so much as after an actor and especially after a musician. Music calls forth a direct physical effect, sometimes acute, sometimes chronic." In another place he remembers that he had thought out something very good concerning woman's character, but is unable to recall it further than to say: "It seems to me it was that the peculiarity of woman's character is that her feeling alone guides her life and that reason only serves her feeling. She cannot even understand that feeling can be made subservient to reason." Finally we find this: "Woman—and the legends say it also—is the tool of the devil. She is generally stupid, but the devil lends her his brain when she works for him." A few lines further on Tolstoy adds: "Oh, how I would like to show to women all the significance of a chaste woman. A chaste woman (not in vain is the legend of Mary) will save the world." We cannot attempt to reconcile the inconsistencies which these quotations reveal.

The notes to the text, by Mr. V. G. Chertkov, add greatly to the interest of the book. They are abundant—covering eighty-four pages—and so far as we are able to judge absolutely accurate. Some of them are hardly needed; thus, a reader of Tolstoy's journal scarcely requires to be told that Goethe was a German poet and Kant a German philosopher. It is preferable, however, that the notes to such a publication should be too full than too scanty. Several Americans are mentioned by Tolstoy whose identity might be unknown to the reader unless he were enlightened by Mr. Chertkov's notes, as, for example, Ernest H. Crosby, son of Chancellor Howard Crosby of the New York University, one of the most promising young lawyers of his time, who became a prominent follower of Tolstoy abroad, and Bolton Hall, son of the eminent Irish divine, Rev. Dr. John Hall, minister of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, a translator of one of Tolstoy's works.

With the aid of the notes and an excellent index any one at all interested in Tolstoy will find this volume a most valuable contribution to his knowledge of the greatest character in modern Russian literature.

U. S. Revolver Shots Make High Scores

Dr. J. B. Ochsner Of Colorado Winner Of This Year's Championship

The following scores will be interesting to the local revolver enthusiasts. Some of the best revolver shots in the world competed in the match which is held annually under the auspices of the United States Revolver Association, throughout the different states. The match, which is the most important held, calls for 50 shots to be fired at 20 yards, time limit 1 hour—Standard American targets used. The local Club's annual all-comers championship competition under the same conditions will be held during October. One noticeable feature is the absence of lady competitors in the U.S.A., whereas in Shanghai there were 8 ladies in 1915 and 5 ladies in 1916 and some excellent scores were made by them. It is hoped that all persons interested in this useful sport will enter in the competition. The range will be open for practice daily.

Chinese Press Distrusts Japan's New Move

LOCAL Chinese newspapers are manifesting keen interest in Baron Ishii's announcement in New York of the Japanese intention to apply the Monroe Doctrine to China. The Chinese editors are prompt to voice their disapproval of the proposed scheme and their distrust of Japan.

The Sin Wan Pao for instance says: "The Monroe Doctrine was promulgated by the United States to protest the little countries of South America from foreign aggression. Today, the Japanese Government copies the idea and proclaims that it will apply the principle to the Far East, placing itself in the position of a superior nation and ranking China as a protectorate. Admitted that we are weak, can we stand this assumed superiority of Japan and her domination?

"The direct meaning of the Monroe Doctrine is protection, while its indirect meaning is interference. Are we already unable to exist as a country and must we depend upon the protection and accept the interference of the Japanese?

"The domestic storm is daily increasing in its terror. We hope those who are concentrating their efforts on fighting their brethren will refrain from doing so for the present and seriously digest this alarming proclamation! China must unite!"

The Chung Hua Sin Pao comments: "The desire of Japan to exercise the Monroe Doctrine in the Far East has been cherished for many years. But as this would have stepped on the toes of the other foreign Powers, she had to suppress her feelings until now.

"The time Japan feels is opportune for the gratification of this desire. Europe is busily engaged in war and may not be able to call a halt. The United States must be informed of her intentions! The mission of Baron Ishii to America, as described by such authorities as Putnam Weale and T. R. Jernigan, was to settle with the United States all questions pertaining to the diplomatic relations between the two countries and China.

"What we are anxious to learn upon the return of Ishii is whether the Japanese policy in China is to be in accordance with the Monroe Doctrine as exercised by the United States in South America.

"From our previous experience, we are inclined to believe that the Monroe Doctrine as understood by the Japanese is a doctrine of aggression. The world knows and the Nipponese themselves know that their policy in our country is to undermine our sovereignty, threaten our independence and aggrandise themselves with our territory."

In connection with this discussion, we find that the Tokio Mainichi on September 24, just before Ishii's announcement, printed a rather blood-thirsty leader, the point of which was that unless China is over-awed by means of force there will be no peace in China. "Japan desires the unification of China," said the Mainichi's editor. "For that purpose as much assistance as possible is given to China by Japan. The Terauchi Ministry, for that matter, is criticised for being too lenient to China. But China misunderstands us. She gets used to our kindnesses and even goes so far as to hold us under scorn. The Tuan Ministry, whose foundation is about to be established by the support of Japan and other Powers, would mobilise Chinese troops at the request of France and then because of that holds Japan in scorn because Japan does not mobilise when China mobilises.

"This is an insult to Japan. If Japan continues to be lenient toward China in the matter of settlement of disputes in Manchuria between Chinese and Japanese, the Chinese Government will become spoiled and demand that Japanese troops be withdrawn."

But the editor thinks that Japan is to blame for it, because Japan does not know how to over-awe China by means of force. He takes a lesson from the statement of General Skobeleff of Russia, who said that peace in Asia is secured in proportion to the quantity of bloodshed, and says that it is a good policy to adopt in Asia.

The editor further shows his displeasure at the attempt of the Chinese to compare their soldiers with Japanese soldiers. There is a vast difference between them, he observes. Chinese mobilisation is only mobilisation of coolies, who want to get 1 yen a day whereas they are getting only 25 sen a day in China. "It is an insult to Japanese soldiers to compare them with the coolies of China. Unless force is used there will be no unification of China," he concludes.

And the Yorodzu of the same date says that it is now too late for Japan to try to compromise the north and the south of China. The Japanese Government it declares has given support to the north so far. Now that the China policy of Japan has come to a deadlock, an attempt is being made to harmonise the two sections. This shows a lack of wisdom on the part of Japan. New wine should not be kept in an old bag. So the new world requires new men. The Terauchi Ministry therefore must go.

All of which throws much light on the problem of what Japan has in mind when she contemplates a Monroe Doctrine for China.

An English Tribute To The United States

(From The London Observer)

WITHOUT giving all our reasons, we will make a prediction or two. America will be greater in this war than it has ever been. It will show that, like ourselves, it is stimulated by the magnitude of its problems and that no difficulty can daunt it. It will make up for any weakness on the side of Russia by its own grit. It will be more than equal to the best hopes of itself that it has ever cherished. When its devoted little vanguard now preparing in France has come into action it will accept sternly, inexorably, as we have done, the meaning of war. It will surprise its staunchest friends on this side and itself.

There is no doubt that its first million will appear on the front in spring, and as little that when this happens it will shatter the last calculations of the German war makers who trampled three years ago on every plea for arbitration and conference delay, as on the faith of treaties and neutral rights. They destroyed deliberately every possibility of peace. They not only decreed, but forced a premeditated war. As was shown recently by an historic revelation in the Times, they had determined on July 5, 1914, to make the war—that is, nearly a month before it broke out. In accordance with a long formed plan of aggression and conquest they "shut the gates of mercy on mankind." Millions on millions throughout the world were doomed to slaughter, maiming, ruin, privation, sorrow irreparable, by one arbitrary camarilla of a few men. More crimson is their guilt than that of all the private homicides who ever lived. This war cannot end until it is made certain that universal war never again can be brought on the world by similar men and similar means.

America understands this as well as we do, and knows that if the system of war-made-to-pay is not rooted out of the world now it will yet threaten the very heart of its own life in a struggle more perilous than this. So as regards the ships necessary for the right and decisive employment of the men, the guns, the aircraft and the money, we say that the United States will make good and will make good in time. Sometimes, as when we pressed for a statue or bust to George Washington in Westminster Abbey, as well as for a monument to Lincoln in Parliament Square, it has been said of us that we are more than rationally pro-American. We are; and we are proud of it; and we speak for the whole British people, whose confidence in American capacity and determination rests like our own on reason and on that which is deeper. Long ago an English hand upon a distant ocean wrote in an American album these lines:

Sea-born we are; sea-born you;
Still upon the sea we're met;
The sea it was that parted us;
The sea will bind us yet.

The keyword for both the kindred societies who guard the two sides of the Atlantic and must command full intercourse and traffic across that ocean or perish is: "Launch, launch, launch."

Slavs Plan New Nation To Free Central Europe

Definite plans for the organisation of a new Slavic nation were completed recently by representatives of the Serbs, Croats and Slovens, or Yugoslaves, who now are under the dominion of Austria-Hungary. The essential features of this agreement, published in the official organ of the Servian government, follows:

The authorised representatives of the Serbs, Croats and Slovens, recognising that the desire of our people is to free itself from all foreign yoke, and to constitute itself in an independent national state, agree in declaring that the state must be founded on the following principles:

The state of the Serbs, Croats and Slovens, who are also known as Southern Slavs or Yugoslavs, will be a free and independent kingdom with indivisible territory and unity of allegience. It will be a constitutional democratic and parliamentary monarchy, under the Karageorgevitch dynasty, which has always shared the feelings of the nation and has placed the national will above all else.

The state will be named "The Kingdom of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes," and the style of the sovereign will be "King of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes." The state will have a single coat of arms, a single flag and a single crown, its emblems being composed of the present existing emblems.

The special Serbs, Croat and Slovene flags and coats of arms may be freely hoisted and used.

The three national denominations will be equal before the law, and may be freely used in public life.

The two alphabets, Cyrilic and Latin, will also rank equally throughout the kingdom.

All recognised religions shall be exercised freely and publicly, and in particular the Orthodox, Roman Catholic and Mussulman creeds, which are chiefly professed by our people, will be equal and will have the same rights in regard to the state.

The calendar shall be unified as soon as possible.

The territory of the kingdom will include all territory compactly inhabited by our people, and cannot be mutilated without harm to the vital interests of the community. Our nation demands nothing that belongs to others, but only what is its own. It desires freedom and unity. Therefore, it refuses consciously and firmly all partial solutions of the problem of its deliverance from Austro-Hungarian domination and of union with Servia and Montenegro in a state forming an indivisible whole.

In the interests of freedom and of the equal rights of all nations, the Adriatic Sea shall be free and open to all.

All citizens shall be equal and enjoy tthe same rights towards the state and before the law.

Deputies to the national parliament shall be elected by universal suffrage, with equal direct and secret ballot.

The constitution, to be established after the conclusion of peace by a constituent assembly elected by universal suffrage, will be the basis of the life of the state. It will create the possibility of organising local autonomies. It will come into force after receiving royal sanction. The nation thus unified would form a state of some 12 million inhabitants which would be a powerful bulwark against German aggression and an inseparable ally of all civilised states and peoples.

Kaiser Compared House And Gerard To Crows At Potsdam

Said Their Black Clothes Made Them Like Undertakers At Gay Feast And Spoiled The Picture

By James W. Gerard

CHAPTER XXVIII

In May, 1914, Colonel House and his beautiful wife arrived to pay us a visit in Berlin. He was, of course, anxious to have a talk with the Emperor, and this was arranged by the Emperor inviting the colonel and me to what is called "the Schrippenfest," at the new palace at Potsdam.

For many years—in fact, since the days of Frederick the Great—the learning (Lehr) battalion, composed of picked soldiers from all the regiments of Prussia, has been quartered at Potsdam. On a certain day, in April this battalion has customarily been given a dinner at which the men eat white rolls (Schrippe) instead of the usual black bread. This feast has been carried on from these older days and has become quite a ceremony.

The colonel and I motored to Potsdam arrayed in dress suits and waited in one of the salons of the ground floor of the new palace. Finally the Emperor and the Empress and several of the princes and their wives and the usual dignitaries of the Emperor's household arrived. The colonel was presented to the royalties, and then a divine service was held in the open air at one end of the palace. The Empress and princesses occupied large chairs, the Emperor stood with his sons behind him, and then the various dignitaries of the court. The Lehr battalion was drawn up behind. There was a large band and the choir boys from the Berlin cathedral. The service was very impressive, not less so because of a great Zeppelin which hovered over our heads during the whole of the service.

After divine service, the Lehr battalion marched in review and then food and beer were served in long arbors constructed in front of the palace. While the men were eating, the Emperor and Empress and princes passed among the tables, speaking to the soldiers. We then went to the new palace, where in the extraordinary hall studded with curious specimens of minerals from all countries a long table forming three sides of a square was set for about sixty persons. Colonel House and I sat directly across the table from the Emperor, with General Falkenhayn between us. The Emperor was in a very good mood, and at one time, talking across the table, said to me that the colonel and I, in our black dress suits, looked like a couple of crows, that we were like two undertakers at a feast and spoiled the picture. After luncheon the Emperor had a long talk with Colonel House, and then called me into the conversation.

House Meets Von Tirpitz

On May 26 I arranged that the colonel should meet Von Tirpitz at dinner in our house. We did not guess then what a central figure in this war the great admiral was going to be. At that time and until his fall he was Minister of Marine, which corresponds to our Secretary of the Navy Department, and what is called in German "Reichsmarineamt." The colonel met the Chancellor, Von Jagow, Zimmermann and many others.

There are two other heads of departments connected with the navy of equal rank with the Secretary of the Naval Department and not reporting to him. These are the heads of the naval staff and the head of what is known as the "Marine Cabinet." The head of the naval staff is supposed to direct the actual operations of warfare in the navy and the head of the Marine Cabinet is charged with the personnal of the navy, with determining what officers are to be promoted and what officers are to take over what ships or commands.

While Von Tirpitz was Secretary of the Navy, by the force of his personality he dominated the two other departments, but since his fall the heads of these two other departments have held positions as important as that of Secretary of the Navy, if not more important.

On May 31 we took Colonel and Mrs. House to the aviation field at Joachimsthal. Here the Dutch aviator Fokker was flying, and after being introduced to us he did some stunts for our benefit. Fokker was employed by the German army and later became a naturalised German. The machines designed by him and named after him for a long time held the mastery of the air on the west front.

War Seemed Distant

The advice of Colonel House, a most wise and prudent counsellor, was at all times of the greatest value to me during my stay in Berlin. We exchanged letters weekly, I sending him a weekly bulletin of the situation in Berlin and much news and gossip, too personal or too indefinite to be placed in official reports.

War with Germany seemed a thing not to be even considered when in this month of May, 1914, I called on the Foreign Office by direction to thank the Imperial Government for the aid given the Americans at Tampico by German ships of war.

Early in February Mr. S. Bergmann, a German who had made a fortune in America and who had returned to Germany to take up again his German citizenship, invited me to go over the great electrical works which he had established. Prince Henry of Prussia, the brother to the Emperor, was the only other guest, and together we inspected the vast works, afterwards having lunch in Mr. Bergmann's office.

Prince Henry has always been interested in America since his visit here. On that visit he spent most of his time with German societies and the like. Of course, now we know he came as a propagandist with the object of welding together the Germans in America and keeping up their interest in the Fatherland. He made a similar trip to the Argentine just before the great war with a similar purpose, but I understand his excursion was not considered a great success from any standpoint. A man of affable manners, no one is better qualified to go abroad as a German propagandist than he. If all Germans had been like him there would have been no world war in 1914.

On March 18 we were invited to a fancy dress ball at the palace of the Crown Prince. The guests were mostly young people and officers. The Crown Princess wore a beautiful Russian dress with its characteristic high frontpiece on the head. The Crown Prince and all the officers present were in the picturesque uniforms of their respective regiments of a period of 100 years ago. Prince Oscar, the fifth son of the Kaiser, looked particularly well.

The hours for balls in Berlin, where officers attended, were a good example for hostesses in this country. The invitations read for 8 o'clock and that meant 8 o'clock. A cold dinner of perhaps four courses is immediately served on the arrival of the guests, who, with the exception of a very few distinguished ones, are not given any particular places. At a quarter to 9 the dancing begins, supper is at about 11 and the guests go home at 12, at an hour which enables the officers to get to bed early.

Ballet At Russian Embassy

During the season there were balls at the British and French embassies and performances by the Russian Ballet then in Berlin at the Russian embassy.

The wonderful new royal library, designed by Ihne, was opened on March 22. The Emperor attended, coming in with the beautiful Queen of Rumania walking by his side. She is an exceedingly handsome woman, half English and half Russian. Some days later I was presented to her at a reception held at the Rumanian Minister's and found her as pleasant to talk to as good to look upon.

At the end of March there was a horse show. The horses did not get prizes for mere looks and manners in trotting and cantering as here. They must all do something; as the horse is considered primarily as a war horse. For instance, stopping suddenly and turning at a word of command, etc. The jumping was excellent, officers riding in all events. It was not a function of "society," but all "society" was there and most keenly interested, for in a warlike country, just as in the Middle Ages, the master's life may depend upon the qualities of his horse.

I have always been fond of horses and horse-racing, and the race tracks about Berlin were always an attraction for me.

Many of the drivers and jockeys were Americans. Taral was a successful jockey for my faher-in-law, Marcus Daly. He is the trainer of one of the best racing stables in Germany, that of the brothers Weinberg, who made a fortune in dyestuffs. "Pop" Campbell, who trained Mr. Daly's Ogden, a Futurity winner, is also a Berlin trainer. The top-notch jockey was Archibald, of California. McCreery, who once trained for one of my brothers, had the stable which rivaled the Weinbergs, that of Baron Oppenheim, a rich banker of Cologne.

The German officers are splendid riders and take part in many races. The Crown Prince himself is a successful jockey and racing stable owner.

Annual Steeplechase

On June 5 at the annual hunt race, the big steeplechase of the year, the Emperor himself appeared at the Grunewald track, occupying his private box, a sort of little house beyond the finish.

Bookmakers are not allowed in Germany. The betting is in mutual pools. About 17 per cent of the money paid is taken by the jockey club, the State and charities, etc., so that the better with this percentage running always against him has little chance of ultimate success.

Many of the races are confined to horses bred in Denmark and the central empires.

All of us in the embassy joined the Red-White Tennis Club, situated in the Grunewald about five miles from the center of Berlin. The Crown Prince was a member and often played there. He is an excellent player, not quite up to championship form, but can give a good account of himself in any company short of the top class. He has the advantage of always finding that the best players are only too glad to have an opportunity to play with him. At this tennis club during all the period of the feeling of hatred against America we were treated with extreme courtesy by all our German fellow members.

Exchange Professors Arrive

We saw a great deal of the two exchange professors in the winter of 1913-14. Professor Paul Shorey of the University of Chicago and Professor Archibald Coolidge of Harvard. These exchange professors gave courses and lectures in the universities and their first appearance is quite an event. On this first day in 1913 they each delivered a lecture in the University of Berlin, and on this lecture day Prince August Wilhelm, representing the Kaiser, attended. The Kaiser used invariably to attend, but of late years I am afraid had rather lost interest in this enterprise, at first so much favored by him.

The Cologne Gazette at one time after the commencement of the war, in an article, expressed great surprise that America should permit the export of munitions of war to the Allies; it said, quite seriously, that Germany had done everything possible to win the favor of America, that Roosevelt had been offered a review of German troops, that the Emperor had invited Americans who came to Kiel on their yachts to dine with him, and that he had even sat through the lectures given by American exchange professors!

A Delayed Cable Contract

Before the war there was but one cable direct from Germany to America. This cable was owned by a German company and reached America via the Azores islands. I endeavored to obtain permission for the Western Union Company to land a cable in Germany, but the opposition of the German company, which did not desire to have its monopoly interfered with, caused the applications of the Western Union to be definitely pigeonholed. After the outbreak of the war, in August, 1914, when I told this to Berlin of the Hamburg-American Line and Von Gwinner, head of the Deutsche Bank, and when they thought of how much they could have saved for themselves and Germany and their companies if there had been an American-owned cable landing in Germany, their anger at the delay on the part of official Germany knew no bounds. Within a very short time I received an answer from the Foreign Office granting the application of the Western Union Company, providing the cable went direct to America. This concession, however, came too late, and, naturally, the Western Union did not take up the matter during the war.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

The Effects of Opiates.

THAT INFANTS are peculiarly susceptible to opium and its various preparations, all of which are narcotic, is well known. Even in the smallest doses, if continued, these opiates cause changes in the functions and growth of the cells, which are likely to become permanent, causing imbecility, mental perversion, a craving for alcohol or narcotics in later life. Nervous diseases, such as intractable nervous dyspepsia and lack of staying powers, are a result of dosing with opiates or narcotics to keep children quiet in their infancy. The rule among physicians is that children should never receive opiates in the smallest doses for more than a day at a time, and only then if unavoidable.

The administration of Anodynes, Drops, Cordials, Soothing Syrups and other narcotics to children by any but a physician cannot be too strongly decried, and the druggist should not be a party to it. Children who are ill need the attention of a physician, and it is nothing less than a crime to dose them willfully with narcotics. Castoria contains no narcotics if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

The signature of Chas. H. Fletcher guarantees genuine Castoria

Physicians Recommend Castoria.

"Your preparation known as Castoria I have used for years in children's complaints and I have found nothing better."
JOHN J. LEFFS, M. D.,
Cleveland, Ohio.

"I have prescribed your Castoria in many cases and have always found it an efficient and speedy remedy.
A. F. PEELER, M. D., St. Louis, Mo.

"For several years I recommended your 'Castoria' and shall always continue to do so, as it has invariably produced beneficial results."
EDWIN F. PARDEE, M. D., New York City.

"I have used your Castoria in my own household with good results, and have advised several patients to use it for its mild, laxative effect and freedom from harm."
EDWARD PARRISH, M. D.,
Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Your Castoria is a meritorious household remedy. It is purely vegetable and acts as a mild cathartic. Above all, it does no harm, which is more than can be said of the great majority of children's remedies."
VICTOR H. COFFMAN, M. D., Omaha, Neb.

"Your Castoria holds the acreage of the medical profession in a manner held by no other proprietary preparation. It is a sure and reliable medicine for infants and children. In fact it is the universal household remedy for infantile ailments."
J. A. PARKER, M. D., Kansas City, Mo.

Recipes From an Up-to-Date Cookery Book

Corn Meal and Gluten Bread—Pour 2¼ cups of yellow or white corn meal into 1½ cups of boiling water. It is not sufficient merely to pour the boiling water over the mead in a cold dish. If yellow meal is used, heat it a little, in addition to pouring it into the boiling water, or mix meal and water and heat in a double boiler. When cool, mix with ¾ cup of gluten, rye or white flour (preference being in order named), 1 tablespoon of sugar, ½ yeast cake (or 1 cake if haste is an object) dissolved in ¼ cup of lukewarm water, 2 tablespoons of butter, lard, or a mixture of the two, and 3 teaspoons of salt. Knead thoroughly, place in a baking tin and bake, when risen sufficiently.

Polenta—The ingredients are 1 cup of yellow corn meal, 1 teaspoon of salt, 1 cup of grand American cheese (about 6 ounces), 3½ cups of boiling water, ¼ teaspoon pepper and ¼ teaspoon of mustard. Boil meal in the water with the salt for 2 hours (better over night in double boiler on simmer burner, or in a fireless cooker). Add pepper, mustard and ¾ cup of cheese. Cook 1 minute, turn on greased square tin, and cook. Cut in square pieces; put rest of cheese on top. Bake 15 minutes. Number served 6. Mold in bread pan 3×9 inches, cut in 12 pieces.

Corn Meal Fish Balls—The ingredients are 2 cups of cold white corn meal mush, 1 cup of shredded codfish (dried codfish is best), 1 egg and 1 tablespoon of butter. Soak the codfish to remove the salt, shred. Combine the ingredients and drop by spoonfuls into hot fat. Drain on porous paper. These codfish balls compare favorably in taste with those made with potato and are easily prepared. These may also be sauted, in a small amount of fat in a frying pan. The corn meal should stand over night, to get firm.

Vegetable Chowder—The ingredients are ½ pound dried lima beans, 1 pound of carrots, a little fat, ¼ onion, 1 tablespoon of flour (may be omitted), ½ cup of milk, pepper and salt. Soak the beans over night, drain and cook slowly until tender. Brown the sliced onion in the fat, add this and the diced carrots to the beans and cook slowly, 20 to 30 minutes. The flour, blended with the milk, may be added the last 10 minutes.

Vegetable Pie—The ingredients are 2 potatoes, 3 artichokes, 3 tomatoes, ½ tablespoon of corn meal or barley flour, 2 sticks of celery, 1 pint of milk, ½ tablespoon of drippings or butter, seasoning to taste. Bring the milk to a boil and thicken it with the flour. Cut up all the vegetables into small pieces, mix them, season, and put them into a well-greased pie dish. Pour the thickened milk over them, dot the fat over the top in small pieces. Bake for half an hour or more, keeping the dish closely covered, except for the last 5 or 6 minutes, to give the top a chance to get brown. Test the vegetables, to see if they are tender, before serving up, as sometimes they take longer than the half hour to cook, depending on their age and the heat of the oven. You can use any vegetables you like for this pie, and in any proportions.

Curried Cauliflower—This calls for 1 good cauliflower, 1 small onion, 1 small apple, 2 ounces of butter or drippings, 1 teaspoon of curry powder, ½ pint of stock, ½ tablespoon of corn flour, a pinch or ginger, ½ teaspoon of sugar, salt and pepper to taste. Make a rich sauce by frying the onion and the apple, chopped finely in the fat. Stir in the curry powder and the corn flour, moistened with a little cold water. Cook these for a minute or two, stir in the ginger, sugar and seasonings, and pour in the stock. Bring to boiling point and simmer for about 5 minutes, stirring well. Taste the sauce to make sure that the seasoning is right, adding salt or pepper, if necessary; then pour it over the cauliflower, previously cooked in boiling salted water, then put in a very hot dish.

Carrot Mold—The ingredients are 2 large carrots, 1 tablespoon of butter or drippings, 1 egg, ½ teaspoon of chopped parsley, seasoning to taste. Boil the carrots and mash very thoroughly; add the fat, melted, the egg well beaten, and the seasoning. Beat them all together very well and put into a greased mold. Bake until hot right through, then turn out and sprinkle with the parsley. This is nice served with melted butter or white sauce.

Corn and Cheese Souffle—This requires: 1 tablespoon of butter, 1 tablespoon of chopped green pepper, ¼ cup of flour, 2 cups of milk, 1 cup of chopped corn, 1 cup of grated cheese, 3 eggs, ½ teaspoon of salt. Melt the butter and cook the pepper thoroughly in it. Make a sauce out of the flour, milk and cheese, add the corn, yolks and seasoning; cut and fold in the whites beaten stiffly; turn into a buttered baking dish and bake in a moderate oven 30 minutes. Made with skimmed milk and without butter, this dish has a food value slightly in excess of a pound of beef and a pound of potatoes.

Green Corn, Tomato, and Cheese—For this dish, you will need 1 tablespoon of butter, 2 cups of grated cheese, ¾ cup of canned or grated fresh corn, 1 ripe pimento, ½ cup of tomato puree, 2 egg yolks, 1 teaspoon of salt, ½ teaspoon of paprika, 1 clove of garlic, 4 slices of bread. Into the melted butter, stir the cheese until it, too, is melted. Then add the corn and pimento, stir for a moment, and add the egg yolk beaten and mixed with the tomato juice and the salt and paprika. Have ready the bread, toasted on one side and very lightly rubbed on its untoasted side with the garlic cut in two. Pour the mixture over the untoasted side of the bread and serve at once. A poached egg is sometimes placed on top of each portion.

Fruit Cakes—For these, you will need: 1 pound of dates, ½ pound of mixed nuts, juice of 2 lemons, 1 tablespoon of ground rice. Stone and chop the dates. Put the nuts through the mincer. Mix nuts and fruit. Grate in the yellow rind of 1 lemon. Then add the juice of 2 lemons, and, with a wooden spoon, shape into a small roll. Finish the shaping with your hands, dipped in the ground rice. Put on a plate till the next morning, when it will be firm enough to cut in slices.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By William P. Kirk

Mister & Missus Slokum has moved to the country for good, sed Ma to Pa last nite. Wen do we hit the trail?

I doant know, sed Pa; sometimes I think it wud be grand to live in the country all the yeer around & then grave Douts assail me, sed Pa, & misgivings murmur in my ears.

Well, sed Ma, nevver mind about the misgivings, it is time we got sensibul & moved away from this crowded, noisy, hot, busteling big town. I am getting so I dried the awful roar of it, sed Ma.

Life seems to be jest one awful roar after another, sed Pa, weather you are living in the city or in the country. We mite as well maik up our minds that life in the country wudden't be any poet's song, any moar than our existens here in the big burg.

Poets & canaries is the only things that sidesteps all the hard going, sed Pa. We are born to hussel, & we have to keep husseling until our esteemed Under-taiker cums around in his shiny black sute with his coffin catalog under his right wing, sea Pa, & such is life on this here planet.

I doant know what kind of a life we are going to draw the next trip, sed Pa, but I do hoap it will be sumware ware there is all Peace & no War taxes etc. I had a argument with Schultz today, sed Pa. I toald him ware to git off.

Nevver mind about Schultz, sed Ma. I want to talk to you about a nice chicken farm. Missus Slokum is going to raise Plimouth Rocks. She says thare is lots of munny in poly-try if peepul get the lay of it.

Everybody tries raising poly-try onst, sed Pa, & about one person in fifty evver maiks a cent out of it, I know, beekaus a old chicken fancier toald me so. To raise poly-try one must know thare habits, customs, etc.

Surely a smart man like you could pick it up in a few days, sed Ma. If other men maiks a success out of raising chickens, I shud hate to think that my lord & master cuddent do as well.

Thare is a lot of hard work about it, sed Pa, & I am giting old. Littel Bobbie is still too small to cleen chicken houses & surely I wuddent ask my deevoted wife to do it.

You surely wuddent, sed Ma, but we cud hire a man to do all the ruff work. The country is full of men, sed Ma, who wud rather do a littel ruff work on a chicken farm than a lot of ruff work over in France, & you are so strong & capabel, sed Ma, you wud be as good as three ordinary men.

Not around chicken coops, sed Pa, I tried that onst wen I was a singel bachelor. I thot it wud be nice to have sum chickens on a littel farm & rite poetry for the magazeens to help pay expenses until the chickens got to laying.

I suppoas you done grand at it, sed Ma.

Anybody that evver rote poetry for magazeens will know how grand I done at it, sed Pa. It was moastly up to the hens to keep things going, & they laid the best they knew how, but littel by littel thare strong constitushuns was broak down under the strain. Thay used to watch me opening letters from the magazeens, sed Pa, then poor little hens. Thay thot maybe I wud git a check so thay cud have a vacashun. But the check nevver caim, so it was up to the chicks & one by one thay laid thare last littel white ege & kicked in, see Pa. Poor littel devils, Pa sed.

Well, sed Ma, according to that we won't raise chickens.

No, deer, sed Pa, them is the facts in the case.

Jelly Making By Degrees

"I have learned one thing about housekeeping lately, which I consider so valuable that I want to tell every woman I meet about it," remarked a woman from the South, who has the reputation of being the most model and up-to-date housekeeper in her town. "It is particularly timely just now," she continued, "because it concerns jelly making. And now is the time when most women, who are interested in stocking their preserve closets for the winter, are thinking of jellies.

"One day, not long ago, a friend with a farm in the country drove into town in her automobile and brought me a huge basket of ripe red currants for jelly. They were just right to be used at once. She arrived in the morning and stayed to help me put them up. They had all been washed and cooked and strained and I was ready to add the sugar, when I suddenly discovered that I was practically all out, of that commodity. I lived a long way from any stores, and that was the day, which they had selected out of the middle of the week to close for the afternoon. It was then past luncheon time and the stores were already closed. I needed altogether too much to borrow from the neighbors—I lived away out in the suburbs—and, at first, I did not know what to do. Of course, I could not waste all those quarts of fruit juice, nor all the labor that had gone into them. Then I had a sudden inspiration. Why not can the juice and make jelly later, when I had plenty of sugar and was ready to? My friend exclaimed at the idea—an excellent one, she thought; so we got out the canning apparatus and quickly canned that juice. Now, whenever I wish to, I open a can or two and make a few glasses of jelly at my leisure.

"This is a much easier way than the old-fashioned one, it seems to me; one does not have to stand over a hot stove so long these summer days, and making jelly in small quantities, a little at a time, when convenient, I find quite a labor-saving device. If the fruit juice is canned properly, it keeps very well indeed. Now, do you wonder that I consider this a valuable piece of information to pass on to others?"

Cotton Market Report

Messrs. J. Spunt and Co., write as follows in their weekly cotton market report:—

Chinese Cotton.—We have nothing fresh to report since our last circular was issued, business being of a hand to mouth nature though the decline in silver has stiffened prices to a certain extent, prices being nominally about Tls. ½ higher than last week, both buyers and sellers are conspicuous by their absence pending developments in Yarn circles. Meanwhile news from the flooded district do not tend towards creating any confidence in any large demand for Yarn from the interior, while it goes without saying that a good quantity of harvested and non-harvested Cotton must have suffered from this unwelcome visitation.

The situation on the whole, therefore, cannot be said to be favorable and while slight spurts in the Cotton market may take place from time to time, the general tendency will doubtless be on the easy side, more especially when taking into consideration the absence of demand from Japan and a good Crop just being harvested in this neighborhood. Tone of the market Steady.

LOCAL EXCHANGE MARKET

Messrs. Maitland and Fearon write as follows in their weekly market report:—

Exchanges.—During the week the London price of Silver has declined 7/16d. The drop coincided with the downward movement in our local rates which started last Wednesday, but is probably the effect of the falling off of demand for coinage and the consequent appearance on the market of speculative holdings of silver in London and America. Our local rates for T.T. on London at 4/2 is 8d. lower than last week's closing price and until today official quotations have been quite nominal, the actual selling rate being from 2d. to 3d. lower to December with no sellers forward. During yesterday and today the local gold dealers appeared as sellers of T.T. on London for forward delivery and today are reported to have sold a large amount at 4s. 2d. to 4/2⅛ for November-December delivery. We gather that the silver markets are not strong, so today's steadiness created by the re-sales of T.T. on London can at present only be considered as of a temporary nature. Exports remain dull. Our stock of sycee and bar silver at Tls. 22,250,000 is about Tls. 800,000 higher than last week. The stock of Mexican Dollars at $17,530,000 is $350,000 higher.

Fake Passports Are 'Rules Of Dentistry,' Chinese Printer Told

Witness In Mixed Court Case Says Dr. Kindler So Informed Shopman

One of the three Chinese printers charged with making counterfeit passports was told that he was printing the "rules of dentistry," according to testimony given in the Mixed Court when the case was resumed before Assessor Byrne and Magistrate Kwan yesterday. The only new testimony was given by Dr. Max Kindler's former houseboy, who told of visiting the printing shops at his master's direction in connection with the manufacture of Spanish and Norwegian passports.

Dr. Kindler, former Nanking Road dentist and the prosecution's chief witness, was placed in the witness box for cross-examination when the case was resumed.

His testimony was practically the same as that given in direct examination previously. He told of taking up the work of securing the false passports under pressure from German Consular officials and said he went to the Chinese printers because he knew that any foreign firm would require authority for printing the passports.

He denied that he had given the May Sun company to understand tha the documents were diplomas for dental students.

Zung Kah-hyi, Kindler's boy, testified that he recollected a visit paid his master by a red-faced foreigner some months ago. The man had a paper like the passport exhibits in court and Kindler had given him two or three dollars. Following the visit he was sent by his master to the May Sun printing shop in Foochow Road to fetch the proprietor. The proprietor was not in but another man returned with him and held a conversation behind closed doors with Kindler. The boy said that he was told afterward that the conversation related to the passport manufacture and some time later a package arrived from May Sun's containing the documents. A man then called for the money. The passports were locked up in his master's safe.

The witness told of subsequent visits with Kindler to Loh Kien-tsa, in Honan Road, where the proprietor was asked to print papers exactly the same as those in court. Kindler told the man, the boy stated, that the paper was the "rules of dentistry" and showed the shopman his dentist's card. On seeing this the man said that he would do the work. He also told of visits to the Chung Hua printing shop on Sinza Road, and of subsequent receipt by his master of some 80 or so blank passports.

At the conclusion of the hearing Mr. K. E. Newman announced that the prosecution had subpoenaed two foreigners as witnesses to give evidence at today's hearing.

Mr. Priestwood asked a reduction of bail for his client, Loh Kien-tsa, the Honan Road shopkeeper, and the amount was reduced to $5,000 man and money security.

Mr. F. W. Hadley appeared for Yeu Zung-tsai, manager of the May Sun Printing Co., and Mr. J. A. Salmon for Yang Ying-tsoo, manager of the Chung Hua Printing Co.

Piano Recital

After graduating from the Conservatoire he made successful concert tours, alone as well as in the company of other artists, through Russia and abroad. Mr. Ore is also a graduate of the Petrograd University.

DO YOU KNOW ? ? ?

That over 1,000 people have already visited Hill's Bazaar.

That people who "waste no time on Hill's Bazaar" pay a big price for the time saved.

That we have faith in our prices—we mark every article in plain figures.

That our mode of selling allows you to use your own judgment.

That there is safety and satisfaction in buying under our ONE PRICE system.

That we prefer a small profit on quick selling goods to a fat one on the dragigng sort.

That we give more real value for a dollar than a dollar buys elsewhere.

That we never sacrifice quality for price—We frequently do sacrifice price for quality.

That we add every day NEW GOODS to our tables.

That Home costs continue to rise, and the scarcity of goods is serious.

Moral: Visit HILL'S BAZAAR, 119 Szechuen Road.
